3.3 PROCESSING SIGNALS USING COMPUTER ALGORITHMS. Most signals are analog in nature. Sound, for example, is a pressure variation over time. Images are composed of various light wavelengths at various intensities, over a two-dimensional plane. Many other signal types exist, such as radio frequency waves, bioelectric potentials, and so forth. The key element is to first convert the signal to an ...

Introduction to Signal Processing

CHAPTER 3 Frequency-Domain Analysis 3.1 INTRODUCTION. In the previous chapter, we derived the definition for the z transform of a discrete-time signal by impulse-sampling a continuous-time signal x a (t) with a sampling period T and using the transformation z = e sT.The signal x a (t) has another equivalent representation in the form of its Fourier transform X(jω).
